

No one else can possibly know what kind of power you've got going on inside you. What kind of potential, life force, and creative ability you contain. Only you know the beginning and end of that. And even if you tell them about your dreams, and they nod their head, like, "yes, yes, maybe that's meant to be" they should never need to be convinced that you will reach those dreams. Because your dreams are not theirs. Let go of their opinion. Let go of their judgement. Let go of their support, even if it is coming from the most loving place. Let it go. Because it's not for them to know, this thing that you are dreaming. You know where you're going. You know what you are capable of. There is no need to prove this or explain this or articulate this to anyone else. It is entirely up to you. And you need all the space within you to be free for new realities. Make sure you've cleared that space. Make sure nothing else is influencing that space. Make sure that this dream is all and only you.

